

Summer Reading

Students Entering Grade 2 in August

Another school year is ending and the long days of summer lie ahead. As leisure time activities start to take precedence over academic endeavors, please keep reading high on your child's list of summer activities. Just like other skills your children are learning, such as how to hit a baseball or play the piano, reading needs to be practiced every day to maintain and strengthen skills. It is important for your child to continue to read each day during the summer vacation so that the skills he/she has worked so hard to learn in First Grade will not slip away! Attached you will find a "Summer Reading Log" for your child to record the books they read over the summer. Please feel free to print out as many as you need. You will also find a book report form. Your child should choose just one of the books they read to do a report on. You should return your child's completed work with them on the first day of school in August. Happy reading!
